HISTORY OF ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-SECOND INFANTRY.

The One Hundred and Twenty-second Regiment of Illinois Infantry Volunteers, was organized at Camp Palmer, Carlville, Ill., in August, 1862, by Colonel John I. Rinaker, and was mustered into the service of the United States September 4, 1862, with 960 enlisted men.

The Regiment remained in camp and was drilled until October 8, and was then ordered and moved to Columbus, Ky. Upon its arrival at that post, it was ordered to go at once to Trenton, Tenn., and report to General G. M. Dodge. The Regiment arrived at Trenton, Tenn., October 12, and relieved the First Kansas Infantry, Colonel George W. Deitzler. Colonel Rinaker was assigned to the command of the post, and troops at that place, consisting of the One Hundred and Twenty-second Illinois Infantry, Seventh Tennessee Cavalry, Colonel Isaac R. Hawkins commanding; Fourth Illinois Cavalry, and Captain Sparstroms Battery, Second Illinois Artillery.

The Regiment continued on duty at Trenton till the 12th of November, 1862, when Colonel Rinaker was ordered to take the right wing of the Regiment and proceed to Humboldt, Tenn., and relieve the Eighty-first Illinois Infantry, and to take command of the post and troops remaining there, consisting of four companies: Fifty-fourth Illinois Infantry, a part of Fourth Illinois Cavalry, Seventh Wisconsin Battery. This order was at once executed. The remainder of the Regiment was left at Trenton under command of Lieutenant Colonel J. F. Drish.

The force at Humboldt was to hold the Ohio and Mobile Railroad from Trenton to Jackson, Tenn., and guard the ordnance, commissary and quartermaster's supplies stored at that place.

This service was performed until the 18th of December, when the Regiment moved to Jackson, Tenn., to aid in defense of that place against an impending attack thereon by heavy forces of cavalry under Forrest. From Jackson, the One Hundred and Twenty-second Regiment, with the Forty-third and Sixty-first Illinois, moved out on the 19th of December, and had a skirmish with the enemy that day and moved on out to Lexington, Tenn., and returned to Jackson on the 21st of December.

Thence moved to Trenton on the 23d of December, and the same night marched in obedience to orders to a point near Humboldt, to protect a force repairing Ohio and Mobile Railroad, which had just been destroyed by rebel cavalry. During the time that the Regiment had been about Jackson, the rebel cavalry under Forrest had captured the hospital at Trenton, and had made prisoners of the sick and the guards on duty at Trenton, by which the One Hundred and Twenty-second for the time being lost Major James F. Chapman and Captain B. Cowan, W. W. Freeman, Regimental Quartermaster, and 60 enlisted men taken prisoners.

On the 27th of December, 1862, nine companies of the One Hundred and Twenty-second, nine companies of Thirty-ninth Iowa Infantry, Fiftieth Indiana Infantry, and a part of Seventh Wisconsin Battery, with three pieces of artillery, and 40 men of Eighteenth Illinois Infantry, the latter mounted, whole under command of Colonel Cyrus L. Dunham, Fiftieth Indiana, marched from Trenton to head off the cavalry force under Forrest then moving back from near Columbus, Ky., toward the Tennessee River. Moved by way of Huntington, Tenn., and on the 30th of December a skirmish occurred with the enemy, and on the 31st of December, 1862, at about 11 A. M., the One Hundred and Twenty-second and Fiftieth Indiana and the 40 men of the Eighteenth Illinois Infantry, and a part of the Seventh Wisconsin Battery, constituting a force of 1,540 men, engaged in battle with the enemy under Forrest, numbering over 6,000 men with eighteen pieces of artillery. The fight continued till about 2 o'clock P. M., when the enemy fell back leaving the field in possession of the little force that had fought them for nearly three hours, and had during that time captured eight pieces of artillery and 500 prisoners, among them Major Strange, Forrest's Adjutant General. The loss of the One Hundred and Twenty-second Regiment in killed were 22 enlisted men and 1 officer, Lieutenant Bristow, in wounded 56 enlisted men and 2 officers Colonel Rinaker and Captain William B. Dugger; one man missing, making a total loss of 80 men.

On the 3d of January, 1863, the Regiment returned to Trenton, Tenn., and remained there on duty till February 17, when it moved to Corinth, Miss., and was assigned to the First Brigade, Second Division, Sixteenth Army Corps, Colonel Mersey, of Ninth Illinois, commanding Brigade, General Sweeney commanding Division; General Dodge commanding left wing of the Sixteenth Corps. The Brigade was composed of Ninth, Twelfth, Sixty-sixth and One Hundred and Twenty-second Illinois, and Eighty-first Ohio Infantry.

From April 15 to 25, the Regiment took part in expedition to Town Creek, Ala., and was engaged with a rebel force at Town Creek. The Regiment was there commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Drish. June 25, Mersey's Brigade was put in charge of Memphis and Charleston Railroad, from Corinth to Grand Junction. The One Hundred and Twenty-second had that part from Middleton, Tenn., to Grand Junction; headquarters of the One Hundred and Twenty-second at Saulsbury, Tenn. During the ensuing months till the 30th of October, 1863, the men were constantly on duty and often engaged in skirmishes with cavalry forces of the enemy threatening the railroad.

Colonel Rinaker was in command of the post at Saulsbury and of the forces at that post, consisting of a part of One Hundred and Twenty-second Regiment, the Eleventh Illinois Cavalry and the Seventh Tennessee Cavalry. On October 30, the Regiment moved from Saulsbury to Corinth, thence on the 1st of November, to Iuka, Miss. Colonel Rinaker was assigned to the command of post.

On November 5, the Regiment moved with the rest of the right wing, Sixteenth Corps, to Eastport, Miss. At that point the One Hundred and Twenty-second was left in charge of that place. A depot of supplies was established there. Colonel Rinaker was assigned to the command of the post and troops, consisting of the First New Jersey Cavalry, Thirty-fourth and Thirty-fifth New Jersey Infantry, and Seventeenth and One Hundred and Seventy-eighth New York Regiment of Infantry. The Regiment remained at Eastport till December 8, 1863, when it moved to Paducah, Ky., and thence on the 19th of January, 1864, to Cairo, Ill., Colonel Rinaker being assigned to the command of the post. On the 24th of March, 1864, a considerable rebel force under Forrest attacked Paducah, Ky., and three companies of the One Hundred and Twenty-second, E, H and K, took part in the defense, and aided in repelling the enemy in the three several assaults they made on Fort Anderson at that place.

June 26, 1864, the Regiment after the defeat of Sturgis at Guntown, Miss., was ordered to join the command of General A. J. Smith, then at La Grange, Tenn. Smith's command at that time was the right wing of the Sixteenth Corps. The Regiment proceeded via Memphis, Tenn., and on the 3d of July, 1864, reported to General A. J. Smith at La Grange, and was assigned to the First Brigade, Second Division.

On the 4th of July, the command started on the march for Okalona, Miss., for the purpose of attacking the force then concentrating at that place under the command of Lieutenant General S. D. Lee, of the Confederate army. Cavalry skirmishing took place every day. The march was long, toilsome, the weather was hot; many cases of sun stroke occurred.

On the 11th the command reached Pontotoc, Miss., remained there till the 13th. Then the Regiment with the rest of the command marched to the village of Tupelo, and thus turned the right flank of the fortified position of the rebels in front of Okalona, compelling them to come out and attack us at Tupelo. On the 14th of July, about 9 o'clock A. M., the enemy, under General S. D. Lee, came forward in fine style and attacked General Smith's command posted in the rear of a crest of a ridge fronted by an open field, across which the rebels had to come. The One Hundred and Twenty-second was stationed with its right just covering the road leading into Tupelo. As the enemy advanced across the open plain, covered by a heavy artillery fire, the One Hundred and Twenty-second and the rest of the Brigade moved forward from the opposite side, and met the enemy just at the crest of the ridge, and opened a destructive fire upon them with such effect that their ranks were shattered and the whole force driven back with heavy loss in men and officers. Three times the assault was repeated and repulsed with equally disastrous results to the rebel force. At about 2 P. M., the enemy discomfited, withdrew, leaving the Union forces masters of the field, and in possession of the rebel dead. The loss of the One Hundred and Twenty-second were 10 killed and 33 wounded. Among the killed was Captain Burrough, of Company K. Lieutenant J. M. Valentine, of Company A, was severely wounded.

The Regiment with the rest of the command returned to Memphis on the 23d of July, 1864.

Again on the 4th of August the Regiment marched from Memphis, with the rest of General Smith's command, for Holly Springs, where after being detained a few days, the force moved on to Oxford, Miss. Near Abbyville they had a skirmish with the enemy without serious results to the Regiment. Reached Oxford only to find that the enemy had fallen back still farther.

Thence marched back to Memphis, reaching there on the 31st of August.

On the 8th of September, took boats for Cairo, Ill. Thence to Jefferson Barracks, Mo.

Thence marched to Ironton, Mo., to meet a rebel force under General Sterling Price. The foxy old fellow turned aside and we had to return, and thence march into Western Missouri in the vain attempt to meet the same rebel force. This march covered the distance of 700 miles going and returning to and from the vicinity of Kansas City. The weather was much of the time during the march, cold, and the ground rough and frozen, the shoes of the men worn out and much severe suffering was endured.

Upon the return of the command to St. Louis on the 18th of November, 1864, the men were supplied with new shoes and clothing. Then the command of General A. J. Smith was ordered to go to the defense of Nashville, Tenn. This command then consisted of three Divisions of Infantry, and was called the "Detachment Army of the Tennessee." The One Hundred and Twenty-second Regiment proceeded to Nashville, where, on the 15th and 16th of December, 1864, it took part in the battle of Nashville, capturing four pieces of artillery and a battle flag from the enemy; and losing 14 killed and wounded 26 men. The conduct of the Regiment in this battle was commended specially in the report of General Garrard, the Division commander. The Regiment was commanded in the battle by Lieutenant Colonel James F. Drish. The Regiment took part in the pursuit of General Hood's Army from Nashville to Eastport, Miss.

Thence on the 18th of February with residue of the Detachment of the Army of the Tennessee, under General A. J. Smith, proceeded to New Orleans, La., arriving there on the — of February. At that place other troops were added to the command, and it became thenceforth the Sixteenth Corps, Army of the Tennessee.

On the 6th of March the One Hundred and Twenty-second Regiment with the One Hundred and Nineteenth Illinois, Twenty-first Missouri Infantry, Eighty-ninth Indiana, constituting First Brigade, Second Division, Sixteenth Army Corps, and Fifty-eighth Illinois, under command of Colonel Rinaker, went by ocean steamer to Dauphine Islands, near mouth of Mobile Bay.

On the 23d of March, moved thence with the rest of the Sixteenth Corps to assist in the investment of rebel fortifications at Blakely and Spanish Fort, these constituting the eastern defenses of Mobile. And on the 9th of April, 1865, it occupied the center of the line formed by the First Brigade, General Garrard's Division, Sixteenth Corps of the Army of the Tennessee, in the assault upon the rebel works at Blakely, and materially aided in capturing that place. The Brigade captured 10 pieces of artillery and the rebel General's headquarters, a number of rebel flags, and several hundreds of prisoners, among them Generals Liddell and Thomas and their staff officers. The Regiment was commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Drish, who was seriously wounded by a piece of shell. The loss of the Regiment was 20 men killed and wounded. Colonel Rinaker commanded the Brigade in the charge as he had done for a considerable time previous thereto. The Regiment with the rest of the Sixteenth Corps on the 12th of April, left Blakely and marched thence to Montgomery, Ala., arriving there on the 26th of that month.

On the 5th of June, the Regiment returned to Mobile, Ala., and on the 15th of July it was mustered out, and proceeded thence to Springfield, Ill., where it was paid off and finally discharged on the 4th of August, 1865.
